

Journalism Concentration Worksheet, 36 credit major

The journalism concentration offers a liberal arts approach to the study and production of multimedia news. Students will learn to gather information through observation, interviews and research and to communicate it through clear and compelling writing enhanced by photography, video, audio, and interactive features. In addition to a toolkit for newsgathering and story production, students will learn how to be more critical news consumers and their own fact-checkers through courses that offer a critical analysis of news and media.

Analytical courses have the prefix MEDIA. Production courses have the prefix MEDP or MEDPL. Writing Intensive courses have a W in parenthesis following the course title.
